

Husband and wife duo: Rob Lewis & Mary Big Bull-Lewis branched out on their own in 2013 with their first small business, R Digital design. Located in the heart of the PNW, Wenatchee, we are a design & print broker providing our clients with well-priced projects, superior customer attention and exclusive designs. We started out small from the spare room at our home, moving into an actual shop in 2019 then to a beautiful shared retail/shop location in 2021 with our sister business, Wenatchi Wear, in South Wenatchee. We offer graphic design services for print; logo development, print materials such as business cards, flyers, marketing materials, to websites, vehicle graphics and more!

Mary Big Bull-Lewis was born & raised in Wenatchee, WA. She is an enrolled member of the Colville Confederated Tribe in Washington State - from Moses, Entiat, and Wenatchi bands & a descendant of the Blackfoot Tribe in Brocket, Alberta, Canada. Her vision for Wenatchi Wear is a modern spin on Native American art while keeping the traditions preserved and sharing important historic stories. Growing up in the Wenatchee Valley, she recognized a lack of Indigenous history taught, and wanted to create a brand that would have the potential to reach many people. She begins the creative process with researching, and then hand-sketching each design. She has a diverse background, working in the legal field for many years & then in the medical community as a Certified Medical Assistant. She is currently a graphic processor, bookkeeper, and marketing gal for R Digital Design while continuing as a creative entrepreneur with Wenatchi Wear. In her free time she enjoys learning cultural traditions, practicing basket weaving, baking, photography, hiking with her pups, and spending time in the outdoors.

Rob Lewis has an extensive creative background and helps bring the designs to life. He is originally from Portland, Oregon. Rob studied at the Art Institute in Phoenix, and has been working in the graphic design field since. He has worked in the silk screen & printing industry for many years, and continued to grow his knowledge in graphic design by learning to build websites, running wide format printers, installing vehicle graphics, and everything else within the marketing world. In his free time, he enjoys hiking, disc golf, playing Minecraft and cartography.